Wakeup Call

Everyday activities like the morning shower and getting dressed for work take on a sense of adventure in this master bath and dressing area, thanks to the ingenuity of the architects and their daring clients. The contemporary space treats the separate elements—the sleek tub, the glass shower cube, the freestanding vanity and, most notably, the egg-shaped standalone closet—as sculptural pieces. By paring away nonessential walls, the architects opened a clear view from the bedroom door to the back of the bathroom, where the tub sits positioned to take in the view of garden and woodlands. There's nothing timid about this space, including the color scheme, where natural finishes in calming hues of gray, sand and white serve as a backdrop to bold splashes of purple.
